Another great pick. Her dress was torn and filthy; she was almost naked; and Hans Henny Jahnn, the author of The Ship was not only a famous organ-builder but also the son of a ship carpenter, which helped him to make the description of the ship so convincing. In the same way, when a monk dwells devoting himself to development, he does not know, 'Today my effluents wore down this much, or yesterday they wore down that much, or the day before yesterday they wore down this much,' still he knows they are worn through when they are worn. Lichfield Gospels, Carpet The New Official K53 Manual.
